

M&A Treuhand: an introduction.

what we stand for

The reality of business is becoming more complex and unwieldy by the day. Flexibility and speed are increasingly important.

To be successful over the long term you must make the right decisions at the right time.

For this reason, M&A Treuhand focuses its consulting on finding and implementing solutions. The size and structure of the company match this positioning.

Experienced consultants with the relevant know-how and competence, and small, flexible teams ensure that the concepts developed can be implemented – efficiently & effectively.

sustainable

Usually, there are several ways to achieve an objective and influence the quality of the result. Whether the chosen measures are also sustainable depends on a large number of factors.

Implementing your specifications without examining the overall effects is not only the easiest option for consultants; it is the safest, too. Because they avoid having to think about the real needs of the client, and can refer to the specifications.

However, you benefit much more from consulting that looks beyond the immediate problem and makes you aware of side effects and possible follow-up problems.

M&A – sustainable support who we are

M&A Treuhand is an auditing and tax consulting firm based in Vienna that focuses on providing advice on Mergers & Acquisition transactions, corporate tax advice for national and foreign groups, and auditing services.

Partners

The company was established in 2000 by Richard Kohlhauser and Christian Drmola.

The three partners of M&A Treuhand have many years of business experience in national and international auditing and tax consulting companies.

Team

In addition to the three partners, the team at M&A Treuhand consists of a range of senior and assistant consultants. They join the various projects depending on their core competences and professional experience.

Cooperation partners

M&A Treuhand provides a network of cooperation partners at home and abroad, including lawyers, management consultants, auditors and tax consultants.

solution-driven

solution-driven

Defining the objectives is the first step in the right direction. A detailed analysis is usually required, revealing the problems that you may face on the way to achieving your objective.

But a detailed analysis of the problems is not enough.

What you need are practicable solutions and concrete recommendations. You have to know which measures will help you achieve which objectives, and how you can sustainably optimize the entire result.

M&A – solution-driven support.

implementation-driven

implementation-driven

Defining objectives and proposing solutions should prevent anything from going wrong. Everyone is informed, everyone knows the schedule, and there are no unpredictable obstacles in sight.

However, even the perfect concept is worthless if decisive errors or omissions occur during the implementation phase. Experience shows that every project has dangers that can lead you off course.

To protect yourself against this, you need help with the implementation – help that supports your project management and ensures that the right action is taken at the right time. Because a project is not finished until the final necessary steps have been completed – on schedule.

efficient & effective

Projects have a beginning and an end. The amount of energy needed to achieve the desired result depends not only on the task, but also on the project team – and on its structure.

Your focus is on the result. But also on the effort you have to put in to achieve it. Losses caused by friction leave tracks – sometimes very serious ones. In your budget and in your schedule.

The experience and lean structure of your consulting team, as well as its continuity and expertise, prevent you from wasting time and money and create the basis for the successful completion of a project.

M&A – efficient & effective support.

focused

focused

Tasks and circumstances are becoming more complex and intractable all the time.

So specialist teams tend to develop highly complex and detailed solutions. They don't always see the forest for the trees.

You only benefit from simple solutions that focus on the major issues and that can be implemented in daily business easily.

M&A – focused support.

National and international networks are becoming the hallmarks of business life. Decision-makers have obligations to their various stakeholders, and are subject to a host of influences.

This in turn increasingly leads to conflicts of interest among consultants. Even among apparently neutral partners, who in some cases no longer have room to maneuver freely.

Thus, you can only be successful and survive on the market if your consultant works exclusively in your interest.

M&A – independent support.

Everything is flowing. New developments in tax, corporation and accounting law can have a significant influence on your company.

Your business will not benefit from consultants who don't alert you to forthcoming developments.

An attentive consultant will identify the impact of relevant developments and advise you on them in good time.

M&A – proactive support.
